

Mexican style in a waterline tile

Latin Accents tiles were initially made in Mexico from local clays but in 2007, they began applying their traditional designs to porcelain bodies imported from Europe which have less than 0.1 per cent absorption. They then go through a multi-step glazing process involving hand-painting the decorative elements onto the tiles.

This results in adding texture to the surfaces. The glazes have been testing for suitability in swimming pool environments. At the moment Latin Accents has no distribution in Australia, but would be interested in finding a suitable partner.

Bright, youthful autumn designs

Vici Swimwear recently launched their rich Autumn designs. Brand Manager, Susan Mole says their colours for this year continue to magnify the rich Australian ochres and her customers continue to favour the poignant, bright and sharp youthful designs. "Vici has almost completed nine years of continued growth in the Australian market, and we are passionate for our swimwear to become an iconic 'must have' in every wardrobe," she says.
